

01. Autism can look different in girls.

Every autistic person is unique, but autistic girls may not always fit the “classic” picture of autism that people expect.

This can affect how their autistic characteristics are noticed, understood, and identified.

02.

Autistic girls may be quite sociable and interested in friendships.

However, they may still find the social world confusing, exhausting, or hard to navigate.

03.

Interests may be missed.

Autistic girls may have deep interests that look more “typical” from the outside, such as animals, books, celebrities, or friendships, but the intensity can be very strong.

Change may not seem to bother them.

Autistic girls may seem to cope with change at the time, but the stress can show later as exhaustion, irritability, withdrawal, or overwhelm.
