

01. People communicate, socialise and connect in lots of different ways.

There is no 'right' way to socialise.

How you interact with other people is as unique as your fingerprint!

02.

Neurotypes tend to communicate differently, which may make it harder to understand each other.

This is sometimes called the double empathy problem.

03.

We don't all need to communicate in the same way.

Instead...

04.

It's important for us to learn that it is normal and ok to communicate in different ways.
